The Gentleman From Indiana

BY BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright. 1899. by Doubleday & McClare Co. Convriger, 1902, by McClere, Phillips (2) Co.

CHAPTER XII.

Indiana town may lie asleep a long while, but it always wakes up some time, and when the Herald became a daily. It stern. was then that history began to be made. The Herald printed news. It had made a connection with the Associated Press, and it was sold every that section of the state. Its circulation tripled. Two new men were brought from Rouen for the editorial and reportorial staff, and Parker talked of new presses. During the first week of the daily venture Eph Watts struck off, and the Herald boomed the field. People swarmed into town; the hotel was crowded; strangers became no sensation whatever. A capitalist bought the whole north side of the square to erect new stores, and the Carlow bank began the construction of a new bank building of Bedford stone on the corner opposite the Herald. Then it was whispered, next affirmed, that Main street | way. was to be asphalted. That was the end of the "old days" of Plattville.

But the man who had laid the foundation upon which the new Plattville was to be built, he who through the quiet labor of years had stamped his spirit on the people, lay sick in his friend's house and did not care.

Tom Meredith bad taken him from the hospital to his own home on a quiet street in Rouen, and John was well enough of his hurts to be taken abroad sometimes in a victoria, where he reclined, gray and thin, seemingly no more than a long afternoon shadow. But for days he would lie in a lethargy that made Tom despair. The soul of the country editor was sick in- formed of it. This is a matter vital to !! side of him; he was weary and worn. and pain had left bim dulled, except when he thought of returning to Plattville; then he felt physical borror. The place did not need him, nor he the piace. Fishee had found a young relaprince. Fisbee had found a young relative to run the Herald, who signed his typewritten business letters "H. Fisbee" in a strapping hand that suggested six feet of muscle spattering ink on its shirt sleeves.

I am well aware of the obligations under which your extreme efficiency and your thoughtfulness in many matters have placed me. It is to you I owe my unearned profits from the transaction in cil. and it is to you I owe the Herald's extraordinary recent characteristics.

thought it probable that H. Fisbee was responsibility which shall not be mit a Yankee cousin of the old man, but piled. he did not care much for that or for him long ago that the papers you hold anything except to keep away from Carlow for the rest of his life, since be was to live. And there was no longer need to go there. He was glad to know that. H. Fishee had written him before the oil bubbled in Eph's wells before the oil bubbled in Eph's wells that to buy stock in Mr. Watts' com-pany might be profitable, especially as received a copy I withhold my judgment. the stock was then so low that it was almost imperceptible, and Harkless had a little money he had saved. He let Meredith arrange it for him, and a few opinion of H. Fisbee's integrity-condays later the stock leaped cloudward.

is little as did everything else. He left his bed less and less, took no more drives, and his lethargy deep-

The only thing in which he showed interest was the congressional campaign of the district. It was far advanced before the Herald spoke of it at all, and Harkless saw that McCune had lifted his head.

One day Tom came in and found him writing on a pad on his knee.

Rouen, Sept. 2. Dear Mr. Fishee-Yours of the 1st to hand. I entirely approve all arrangements you have made. I think you understand you have made. I think you understand that I wish you to regard everything as in your own hands. You are the editor of the Herald and have the sole responsibilities including policy, until, ity for everything, including policy, until, after proper warning, I relieve you in person, if that ever happens, but until hat time regard me as a mere spectator. I do not fear that you will make any mis-takes. You have done very much better in all matters than I could have done myself. At present I have only one suggestion: I observe that your editorials concerning way's renomination are something lukewarm. It is very important that he be renominated, not so much on account of assuring his return to Washington (for he is no Madison, I fear), but the fellow McCune must be beaten if we have to send him to the penttentiary on an old issue to do it. The man is corrupt to the bone. He has been bought and sold, and I am glad the proofs of it are in your , as you tell me you found them, as directed, in my desk. The papers you hold drove him out of politics once by the mere threat of publication. You should have printed them last week, as I sug-gested. Do so at once; the time is short. The Herald is a little paper (not so little newadays, after all, thanks to you), but it is an honest one, and it isn't afraid of Rod McCune and his friends. Please let me see as hearty a word as you can say for Halloway also. You can write with ginger. Please let us have some in this matter. I am, very truly yours. JOHN HARKLESS.

When the letter was concluded, he handed it to Meredith. "Please address that, put a 'special' on it and send it, Tom. It should go at once, so as to reach him tonight."

'H. Fisbee?" 'Yes-H. Fishee."

"I believe it does you good to write, boy," said the other as he bent over "You look more chirrupy than you have for several days."

"It's that beast McCune. This young Pishee is rather queer about it. I feit stirred up as I went along." But even before the sentence was finished the favor of age and utter weariness returned, and the dark fids closed over his eyes. They opened again slowly daren't name bim even now, the cow- astonishingly foreign to his desire. The and he took the other's hand and looked ard! The trick lies between McCune up at him mournfully; but, as it were | and young Fishee-the old man is innohis soul shone forth in dumb and clo quent thanks

"I-I'm giving you a jolly summer Tom," he said, with a quivering effort to smile. "Don't you think I am ? I don't-I don't know what I should have

"You old Indian!" said Meredith tenderly.

Three days later Tom was rejoiced y symptoms of invigoration in his patient. A telegram came for Harkless. and Meredith, bringing it into the sick room, was surprised to find the occupant sitting straight up on his couch without the prop of pillows. He was reading the day's copy of the Herald, Plattville woke up in August, and his face was flushed and his brow

"What's the matter, boy?" "Mismanagement, I hope," said the other in a strange voice; "worse, perhaps. It's this young Fishee. I can't morning at stands in every town in think what's come over the fellow. thought he was a treasure beyond dreams, and he's turning out bad. I'll swear it looks like they'd been-well, I won't say that yet, but he hasn't printed that McCune business I told you of. and he's had two days. There is less > than a week before the convention, and"- He broke off, seeing the yellow envelope in Meredith's hand. "Is that a telegram for me?" His companion you do not or if you destroy them you cannot hide where I shall not find you. gave it to him. He tore it open and read the contents. They were brief and unhappy.

Can't you do something? Can't you come down? It begins to look the other K. H.

"Tom, give me that pad and pencil," said the sick man. He rapidly dashed off a note to H. Fisbee.

H. Fishee, Editor Carlow Herald: Dear Sir-You have not acknowledged my letter of the 2d of September by a note (which should have reached me the following morning) or by the alteration is the tenor of my columns which I re-quested, or by the publication of the Moune papers which I directed. In this I hold you grossly at fault. If you have conscientious reason for refusing to carrout my request it should have been com municated to me at once, as should the fact-if such be the case-that you are personal for impersonal, if you like) frien of Mr Rodney McCune. Whatever the m tive which prevents you from operating interests of our community, and you have hitherto shown yourself too alert in ac-cepting my slightest suggestion for me to construe this failure as negligence.

You will receive this letter by 7 this evening by special delivery. You will print the facts concerning McCune in to-

John wondered idly where old Fis-of power and influence. That power is bee had raked up a relative, and he still under my direction and influence.

JOHN HARKLESS

Tomorrow's issue-that fateful print on which depended John Harkless' tained an editorial addressed to the However, his modest riches interest. delegates of the convention, warning them to act for the vital interest of the community and declaring that the opportunity to be given them in the present convention was a rare one, a singular piece of good fortune indeed. They were to have a chance to vote for a man who had won the love and respect of every person in the districtone who had suffered for his championship of righteousness; one whom even his few political enemies confessed they held in personal affection and esteem; one who had been the inspiration of a new era; one whose life had been helpfulness, whose hand had reached out to every struggler and unfortunate; a man who had met and faced danger for the sake of others; one who lived under a threat for years, and who had been almost overborne in the fulfillment of that threat, but who would live to see the sun shine on his triumph, the tribute the convention would bring him as a gift from a community that loved > in every beart. Tom was eagerly watching his comover his eyes in a gesture of intense one second to talk, Tom; I have eightpain him. His name needed not to be told.

"What is it?" Meredith said quickly. "Give me the pad, please." "What is it, boy?"

The other's teeth snapped together. "What is it?" he cried. "What is it? don't want to stop to hunt it up." It's treachery, and the worst I ever Meredith looked him in the eyes. In knew. Not a word of the accusation I the pupils of Harkless flared a fierce of Indignation: That's rather against knew. Not a word of the accusation I the pupils of Harkless flared a fierce of Indignation: That's rather against knew. that editorial-there, there!" He struck an angry, healthy glow, and his teeth the page with the back of his hand and were clinched till the line of his jaw the page with the back of his hand and were children that of an embattled him gravely, you may three threw the paper to Meredith. "Read stood out like that of an embattled fool if you will, and it's likely I am, the love and respect of every person in was thrown out, and he took deep, the district! One who has suffered quick breaths. His shoulders were for his championship of righteousness." squared, and in spite of his thinness Righteousness! Save the mark!" "What does it mean?"

Cune, 'who has lived under a threat for years'-my threat. I swore I would print him out of Indiana if he ever raised his head again, and he knew I going." could. 'Almost overborne in the fulfilment of that threat'-almost! It's a black scheme, and I see it now. This man came to Plattville and went on the Herald for nothing in the world but this. It's McCune's hand all along. He cent. Give me the pad. Not almost overborne. There are three good days cook to give Mr. Harkless his breakfast to work in, and if Rod McCune sees in a burry. Set a cup of coffee on the in the station and sent a line over the congress it will be in his next incarna; table by the front door for me. Run'

He rapidly scribtled a few lines of the pad and threw the sheets to Meredith. "Get those telegrams to the Western Union office in a rush, please. Read them first."

"What is it?" he cried. With wide eyes Tom read them. One was to Warren Smith: Publish McCu

y. Fublish McCune papers, so which H. Fisbee will hand you Beat McCune. JOHN HARKLESS. The second was addressed to H. Fis-

You are relieved from the cares of editorship. You will turn over the manage-ment of the Herald to Warren Smith. You will give him the McCune papers. If cannot hide where I shall not find you.

JOHN HARKLESS.

> CHAPTER XIII. ERY early in the morning s messenger boy stumbled up the front steps of Meredith's house and handed the colored servant four yellow envelopes, night messages. The man carried them upstairs, left three with his master's guest, then knocked on Meredith's door till a response assured him that the occupant was awake and slid the fourth envelope under the door. Meredith lay quite without motion for several minutes, sleeplly watching the vellow rhombold In the crevice, It was a bateful looking thing to mix itself in with a pleasant dream and insist on being read, but after a while he climbed groaningly out of bed and perused the message with heavy eyes, still half asleep. He read it twice before it penetrated.

Suppress all newspapers today. Convention meets at il if we succeed, a delegation will come to Rouen this afternoon. They will come. HELEN.

Tom rubbed his sticky eyelids and shook his head violently in a Spartan effort to rouse himself, but what more effectively performed the task for him were certain sounds that issued from Harkless' room across the ball. For some minutes Meredith had been dully see of a reactio and see to the tovoldfe discriber, and to began to realize that no mere tossing upon a bed would account for a noise that reached him across a wide hall and through two closed doors of thick walnut. Suddenly he heard a quick, heavy tread, shod, in Harkless' room, and a resounding bang as some heavy object struck the floor. The doctor was not gone downstairs. Who in the sick man's room wore shoes? He rushed across the hall in his pajamas and threw open the unlocked door. The bed was disarranged and vastanding in the middle of the floor ling garments at a small trunk. The horrified Meredith stood for a second bleached and speechless; then he rushed upon his friend and seized him with both hands.

"Mad. by heaven! Mad!"

"Let go of me, Tom!"

"Lunatic! Lunatic!" "Don't stop me one instant!"

delirious, boy!" "Delirious nothing! I'm a man." "Go to bed! Go to bed!" Harkless set him out of the way with one arm. "To bed!" he cried. "I'm going to Plattville!" Meredith wrung his hands. "The doctor"-"Doctor be hanged!"

"What in the name of all that's terrible is the matter. John?" His companion slung a light overcoat, unfolded, on the overflowing, mis-It was on every lip that morning and shapen bundle of clothes that lay in the trunk, then he jumped on the lid with both feet and kicked the hasp into panion as he read. Harkless fell back the lock, while a very elegantly launon the pillows with a drawn face, and dered cuff and shirt sleeve dangled out for a moment he laid his thin hand from under the fastened iid. "I haven't een minutes to catch the express. It's more than a mile to the station, and the train leaves here at 9:02. I get there at 10:47. Telephone a cab for me, please, or tell me the number. I they looked massy. Lethargy or malaria, or both-whatever his ailment-"Mean! It means McCune, Rod Mc- it was gone. He was six feet of hot wrath and cold resolution.

> Tom said, "You are going?" "Yes." he answered quietly, "I am

"Then I will go with you." "Thank you, Tom," said Harkless simply. Meredith ran into his room, pressed an electric button and began to dive into his clothes with a panting rapidity } colored man appeared in the doorway. "The cart, Jim!" shouted his master. We want it like lightning Tell the We've got to catch a train. That will be quicker than any cab," he explained to Harkless, "We'll break the ordihance against fast driving getting all from Plattville. down there."

away from the house at a gait that right.

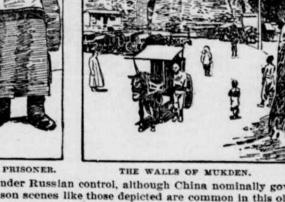

RUSSIAN CAVALRY SCOUTS AT HARBIN, MANCHURIA.

The pride of Russia's army is the cavalry, and it is in this branch of the service that she undoubtedly, man for man, far outclasses Japan. While the Russian horse soldier is not exactly the embodiment of gentleness and refinement, it cannot be denied that he knows how to ride, how to fight and how to take a setback without whining. In fact, it is said that the Russian cavalry is never so dangerous as it is immediately after a somewhat serious reverse. The illustration shows a detachment of cavalry starting from Harbin for a neighboring village, to which it has been assigned for scouting duty.

QUAINT FEATURES OF LIFE IN MUKDEN.

Mukden is at present under Russian control, although China nominally governs the city. For that reason scenes like those depicted are common in this old town, which is the capital of Manchuria and was the original seat of the Mantchoo dynasty, which now rules the empire. The walls of Mukden were once thought to be impregnable, but a single shot from a comparatively obsolete gun would now send them tumbling about the ears of their defenders.

to come till evening. The servant had pained the respectable neighborhood. The big horse plunged through the air, his ears laid flat toward his tail. The cart careened sickeningly, and the face of the tervant clutching at the rail in the rear was smeared with pallor as cant. Harkless, fully dressed, was they pirouetted around curves on one wheel. To him it seemed they skirted ers and death simultaneously, and the speed of their going made a strong wind in their faces.

Harkless leaned forward. "Can you make it a little faster, Tom?" he said. They dashed up to the station amid the cries of people flying to the walls for safety. The two gentlemen leaped from the cart, bore down upon the Meredith tried to force him toward ticket office, stormed at the agent and the bed. "No: get back to bed. You're ran madly at the gates, flourishing their passports. The official on duty eyed them wearily. "Been gone two minutes," he remarked with a peaceable yawn. Harkless stamped his foot on the cement flags; then be stood stock still, gazing at the empty tracks, but Meredith turned to him, smiling. "Won't it keep?" he asked.

"Yes, it will keep," John answered. "Part of it may have to keep till election day, but some of it I will settle before night. And that," he cried between his teeth, "and that is the part of it in regard to young Fisbee!" "Oh, it's about H. Fisbee, is it?"

"Yes, it's H. Fishee." "Well, we might as well go up and see what the doctor thinks of you; there's no train."

"I don't want to see a doctor again ever-as long as I live. I'm as well as anybody.'

Tom burst out laughing and clapped his companion lightly on the shoulder. his eyes dancing with pleasure. "Upon my soul," he cried, "I believe you are. A miracle wrought by the witch wand of indignation! That's rather against drive." "Meredith," said the other, turning to but I don't leave this station except by train. I've only two days to work in, and every minute lessens our chances to beat McCune, and I have to begin by wasting time on a tussle with a traitor.

take any chances on missing that one." "Well, well," laughed his friend, pushing him good humoredly toward a door by a red and white striped pillar, "we'll wait here if you like. But at least go in there and get a shave; it's a clean shop. You want to look your best if you are going down to fight H. Fis-

There's another train at 11:55; I don't "Take these, then, and you will understand," said Harkless, and he thrust his three telegrams of the morning into Tom's hand and disappeared into the barber shop. When he was gone Meredith went to the telegraph office wires to Helen: "Keep your delegation at home. He's coming on the 11:55." Then he read the three telegrams Harkless had given him. They were

Sorry cannot oblige. Present incumbent Ten names later the cart swept K. H. But don't worry. Everything all away from the house at a gait that right. WARREN SMIT the middle of the floor.

You intrusted me with sole responsibil instructions, is entirely my affair and must be carried out as I direct.

H. FISBEE.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

JUST A FRIENDLY COMMENT.

"Just as the train was leaving the handsomest man entered the crowded car and sat down beside me. Unfortunately, however, he got off at the first "Of course. He couldn't get off be

Not Bent Long.

Was o'er he'd spent his final cent— Oh, he was straitened soon. —Philadelphia Press.

fore."-Fliegende Blaetter.

On matrimony he was bent,

But ere the borey moon

SPIED A SNOW WHITE WOLF. of pork and scattered its contents upon the road.

On the Upper Gatineau, Barney Moore, the foreman of a shanty which was short of hay, went to a beaver meadow a few miles away to replenish the supply. The stack contained about five tons, and stood about eight feet above the surface of the snow.

FOOD IN THE FAR NORTH.

Their Usual Supply Cut Off by Deep

Snow - Lumbermen's Shanty Broken Into at Night by Starving Pack.

According to a New York Sun corre spondent, writing from Lachine, Can., the long winter has been very hard upon the wolves. The snow is over four feet deep in the northern woods, and as there has been no rain nor any thaw to make a crust it has been impossible for these sharks of the bush to move about

Red deer, their chief food, were evidently warned by their instinct to prepare for an exceptionally hard season and yarded, in every instance noted, in dense swamps, where browsing material is abundant, so that there has been no need for them to leave their well-

A guide named Beaudouin stumbled the other day upon a yard of 37 deer, and three cow moose, not very far from Lake Coulonge. The deer were all thin,

Fearing lest his snowshoe tracks distance from his actual path. Just at planting its feet in the middle of the shoe print, just where the weight of the man close enough to plant a bullet through

Up the Mattawa three teamsters its forequarters and heart.

but looked healthy and strong.

trodden runways.

Near by he noticed the hoofs and head of a young moose lying in the snow, but not being a hunter in any sense of the word he paid no particular attention to the signs which would have told a great deal to an expert huntsman. As the night was fine and Barney was tired, he ate a biscuit and packed himself well under.

the hay to catch a few hours' sleep. He was awakened by something jumping upon him, and instinctively threw out his arms with all his great strength to dislodge it. A loud howling ensued. and the man threw off his covering and investigated.

The noise proceeded, he found, from the snow at the bottom of the stack where a gaunt old wolf was lifting up its voice in protest at the unceremonion manner in which it had been turned out of bed.

Barney killed the wolf and carried the body to the shanty, where to his surprise he found that although almost as Harkless, fully dressed, was standing in big as a young steer, its weight was only just over 40 pounds. Harkless, if you have the strength to

On the Jean de Terre river, for the walk, come down before the convention. Get here by 10:47. Looks bad. Come if it first time in the history of lumbering, wolves dashed open a shanty door one dark night while the men were sleeping. ity for all matters pertaining to Herald. Declared yourself mere spectator. Does Four greedy creatures came tumbling in as the door fell and stood for an inthis permit your interfering with my pol-icy for the paper? Decline to consider this permit your interfering with my pol-icy for the paper? Decline to consider any proposition to relieve me of my du-ties without proper warning and allow-ance of time. Forced to disregard all sug-gestions as to policy, which, by your own stant stupefied in the firelight.

Each of the 40 men in the bunks raised a shout at the sudden invasion, and no doubt the cowardly brutes would have turned tail hastily at the sound, had not one of them fastened its teeth in a quarter of beef. Immediately there was a terrific fight on among them. An Indian runner, White Duck, happened to be in the shanty that night. To him the wolves meant peltry and gain. So, jumping along the upper tier of burks, he sprang to the doorway and quickly lifted the door into position and set a parrel of flour against it to keep it closed. Then he killed the wolves at his ease. From their famished appearance it was judged that many days had passed since their last square meal.

Joke Was on Professor. When Michael J. Fleming, now a prominent lawyer of Pottsville, Pa., with a strait 100 miles wide. was principal of the Donaldson high school, a few years ago, he had before him one day a very bright boy, but who was hopelessly stumped by a problem in algebra. Prof. Fleming got angry. "You should be ashamed of yourself," he said. "At your age George Washington was a surveyor." The boy looked his instructor straight in the eye and replied: "Yes, sir; and at your age he was president of the United States."

GHT WITH ENRAGED BULL

Young Lord Dalmeny with Cool Head and Clear Eye Finally Shoots the Wild Animal.

Lord Dalmeny, earl Rosebery's had the other day what is der an exciting encount in Dalmen

WOLVES ARE HUNGRY earl, through sneer agility, skillful me neuvering and cool rifle-shooting. Lord Dalmeny was out shooting whe he learned that a bull which had com DESPERATE EXPEDIENTS TO GET to Ratho station by train, evidently driven to a frenzy by the railway journey, had broken away from its keeper and taken up quarters in Dalmen park. Its owner and a number of as sistants had attempted to capture it. but the fierce charges of the animal should lead wolves to this fine herd of sent them for refuge into the trees.

deer, Beaudouin retraced his steps for Lord Dalmeny exchanged his sporting a few miles, taking care to keep a good gun for a rifle and went in pursuit, followed by the gamekeepers. Lord Dald nightfall he made out an almost snow white wolf gingerly picking its steps, meny's first shot had no effect, and the mad bull tore down the narrow path towards the young man, but on each occasion he darted out of harm's way, the had hardened the snow sufficiently to gamekeepers looking anxiously on for bear its weight. Beaudouin drew up the safety of their young master. In the bull's third attack Dalmeny had a narrow escape, only springing up an embankment in time to save himself from found themselves pursued by seven its horns. The bull was bellowing with wolves, which came up from the rear rage, but the young nobleman kept rewith such ferocity that, fearing for their markably cool till he got the opportunilives, the men hastily broached a barrel ty he wanted, when he took steady aim and shot the maddened beast through the heart. The bull fell with a crash and in a few minutes was dead.

SNAKES ESCAPE IN HOUSE

Reptiles Used in Demonstrations Es cape from Box Prison and Hold Revel in Rooms.

Prof. Clark, a biologist in Mount Ollvet college, has sent to Chicago for a cage that will hold a snake or a dozen of them. Mrs. Myrtle Warren, of Benton Harbor, Mich., is hoping that he will get a good one. At least she hopes that she will not have another such experience as resulted from the failure of the professor to hold the worst lot of reptiles that was ever car ried into a private residence.

The educator was being entertained after he had delivered a lecture and the snakes, along with his other belongings, had been carried to his room. In the morning, while the owner of the "200" was out on the street, Mrs. Warren was unable to get upstairs. The rattlers, blue racers, blacksnakes and a half dozen other varieties were disporting themselves on the steps. Then were coiled about the balustrade and other fixtures, having the grandest time they had had since they left jungledom.

GATHERING UP HIS PETS.

Finally the professor arrived on the scene, and drove the aggregation back into the insecure box in which they had been confined.

Cancer Tests in Paris.

Dr. Doyen has just communicated to the Paris Academie des Sciences a monograph on his method of cancer treatment. based on the injection of a toxine microbe known as micrococcus neoformans, the presence of which has been remarked for some years past in neoplastic tumors of rapid development. I wenty-one cases are claimed cured by means of the injection, and 47 more cases are under observation.

Canada Makes Big Claim. Hudson bay, over which the Domins ion government has determined to exercise absolute sovereignty as the "Canadian sea," to the exclusion of the New England whalers, who alone have used its waters, is 1,000 miles north and south and 600 miles east and west.

Asked and Answered. "Is there any way to make a woman stop talking?" asked the newly mer-ried man. "Yes," answered the home-grown sage, "but somehow a man hates to hit woman with an axe."-Chicago Daile

A Correct Answer. Charles-My wife's handwriting is awful! Just look at that letter.

His Friend-How do you manage to "I don't. I just send the check."-

Detroit Free Press. Facts in the Case.

"And are you still keeping boards re" asked Mrs. Flatleigh. "No," replied Mrs. Hashem. "I're tit down to a point where the board. are keeping me."-Cincinnati Eq.